Natalia María Mártir Moreno

Natalia María Mártir Moreno was born in Pozo Alcón, Jaén in 1997. She received the B.Sc. degree in computer science engineering from Universidad de Granada, in 2019, the M.Sc. degree in computer science engineering from Universidad de Granada, in 2020, and M.Sc. degree in secondary school teachers in the specialty of computer science in 2021. She has worked nine months in the Axesor company, "to know to decide", in 2020.

Her current research interests include heterogeneous networks and optimization techniques for 5G networks. Her current research interests include artificial intelligence optimization of 5G networks, propagation channels, antennas and signals. She is in charge of applying artificial intelligence, optimization and improvement algorithms to the projects carried out in the Smart and Wireless Applications and Technologies (SWAT) Group of the University of Granada.